START

Welcome to issue #137. For the second time only, this is an issue spanning two months. The plan was to come back from the Essen show and get on with it. Then the plan was to spend the next weekend at Mick Haytack's and do it on my return. Then events overtook me and time just disappeared.

After trying to get on with it while dealing with the builders and sorting out other things, I realised that trying to get it out in time for people to send orders in for the November deadlines was silly, so decided to have a combined October/November issue. As a result you won't need to send me any orders until December - although early orders are always appreciated. For those who use the Deadline Diary, note that I've brought the December deadlines forward to the beginning of the month.

Let's try and catch up with things in some sort of order, starting with the building works. They've been going on for a while and affect everything.

We're nearly there, with the bathroom tiled and the floors down in the new rooms. We've had some extra work done, which came about because the ceiling at one end of the lounge had to come down, and the question was how to put it back without leaving an obvious sign that only part of it had been replaced. The answer was to add a second layer of plasterboard over the entire ceiling, and that had its plaster coating at the weekend, together with a plaster layer on the walls.

Why, you may ask, would we be plastering the entire lounge. Well, Artex was what we inherited when we moved in, so we had textured surfaces on the ceiling and most of the walls. An extra layer was the quickest and cheapest way to get smooth surfaces. As we had to empty the lounge while this was being done, we're considering getting the lounge floor done before everything comes back in. It depends on whether it can be sorted out in a reasonable timescale. In the meantime, we have no lights in the lounge and the hall, but they should be back in place before too long.

The bathroom has yet to be fitted, but that should be done this week. We also need the new radiators fitted and the old ones put back downstairs, especially as it is getting colder. In another week we might even be able to start putting furniture into the new bedrooms.

After that I get to put flooring in the loft and figuring out how to use the space we've gained up there to best advantage.

The end of September saw me saying farewell to the office, with the main event being a meal at a local pub/restaurant on the Thursday before my leaving day. We had just under twenty people there, and everyone enjoyed it so much we're thinking of repeating the event next year. Not my leaving, just the get together! It gave people a chance to sit down and talk to each other out of the office, a chance that doesn't come along often enough.

My first week as my own boss didn't turn out quite as expected. It started off as planned, registering as self-employed and getting various paper trails under way. On the Tuesday I got diverted when I was called by the head teacher of a private school in Hertfordshire. They'd been without an Internet connection for a week, and could I come and sort it out. Well, this was paid work, so the answer was yes.

On the Wednesday I arrived at the school and started investigating. BT had changed some equipment the week before, and they hadn't been able to get a connection since then. BT said there was nothing wrong with their end - every time they tested the line it came back OK. On my third call to them it became clear that the Internet connection did work - but only while they were actually testing the line. That told them what the problem was. The guy said 'somehow, the router configuration has changed'. Oh, you mean when the router was replaced the week before, maybe?

That was it for the first day, as it was going to take a while to download the correct settings to the router, so I was back the next day. The connection worked for the single machine I was testing on, but failed for the network. I tracked that down to a cable in the equipment cabinet that wasn't properly seated. That would have last been touched when the router was replaced...

The final thing was checking and reconfiguring the workstations, as it had all started with problems with the classroom software, but now that the Internet connection was back the company that supported the software could log in, check the system out and tell us what needed to be done. Early afternoon and I was finished, very pleased to have been able to solve it. Even better, I was earning money, and getting school lunches!

Finishing on the Thursday was good because Friday was the final golf day at 'work', which they graciously let me attend. We had 27 holes of golf over the day at Wavendon Golf Course, in a competition between the IT Unit and the others. I was now part of the others. I did reasonably well but not well enough to help our side win. I guess I still felt like part of the IT Unit.

After a day of golf it was time to relax, and what better way than at TringCon. This was Alan Parr's last TringCon, as he has decided to hang up his convention hat along with his Hopscotch hat. It was the best attended event in the fourteen years the event has been running, and a good time was, as far as I know, had by all.

It seemed a shame to let it disappear, so I made the rash offer to pick up the baton. TringCon XV will take place at the same place on October 6th 2007. That place is the New Mill Social Club on the Bulbourne Road in Tring. You can check the location on the Internet in most map web sites (maps.google.co.uk, uk.multimap.com, www.streetmap.co.uk) by searching for Bulbourne Road - it seems to be the only one in the UK.

If you would like to attend next year's event, let me know and I'll add you to the list. The day will cost £10, which will include a buffet lunch and space to play your games.

Before we get to the trip to Essen, I thought I'd mention how I handle NMRs. NMR stands for No Move Received, and is about what happens when I don't get a full set of orders for a game. This doesn't happen too often, but obviously crops up from time to time.

One option is to hold the game over, but I try to avoid that if possible. Another option is to contact those concerned and ask for orders, but that can make life very complicated. As soon as you ask for orders you are obliged to wait for them, which can delay production of the zine quite significantly.

As a result, it's not something I like doing, unless I know that things are going to be delayed anyway. My preference is to try and move the games along, which means making moves of some sort on behalf of the missing players.

These will not involve a huge amount of thought, as time is an issue. Mistakes will sometimes be made, but I would never deliberately favour any one player over another when making such moves.

I've set up an auto-answering rule on my mail system. This will reply to any messages that land in the FWTDR folder to confirm that they have been received, so if you don't get one of those, your e-mail orders may have gone astray. I can't do anything similar for postal orders, unfortunately, but those seem less likely to go missing.

A week after TringCon we headed off to Germany. We left earlier this year and stopped off in Brussels for a couple of days. Two days isn't much to take in a whole city, so we split the weekend into two trips. The first was into the city itself, while the second was out to see the Atomium, pictured on the cover.

This is the what most people seem to associate with Brussels, and I was expecting it to be in the city centre. Instead it is in Heysel Park, north of the centre, and was built for the 1958 Brussels World's Fair.

Originally planned to be in place for six months, it has survived to become a major tourist attraction. It underwent major renovation work for almost two years, re-opening in February 2006.

At 335 feet tall, it is a magnified iron crystal - blown up 165 billion times. We took the tour around the various exhibitions, which included film of the Atomium being built. They didn't seem to stop for anything, even when the snow was blowing horizontally they were at work fitting the tubes and spheres together.

After the tour we took the lift up to the top sphere and had lunch in the restaurant. Only after did it strike me that most elevated restaurants had closed in the light of terrorist threats.

The lift had an unusual feature - a glass ceiling. The only light came from the lift itself and it was quite eerie rising into the darkness.

I'd been aware of the Atomium for a long time, but had never expected to get inside and find out how it was built. An interesting day.

The Essen Report

And then we got to Essen. It was relatively quiet on the first two days, as the only youngsters were those skipping school. It made up for it over the weekend, though, when any attempt to go round the halls took twice as long, and patience had to be your friend.

The weather was kind to us, almost t-shirt weather the whole time. But you don't want to know about the weather, you want to know about the games! The plan was simple this year. Don't buy too many games, look out for things that are worth buying for the web shop, and make sure everything will fit into the car.

Ah well, nice sentiments, but I failed at the first hurdle. This is the list of games that I came back with:

1830 Variant Box No.1, 1841v2, 1861, 18TN, Age of Steam map for Eastern US & Canada, Age of Steam player mats, Alhambra the Dice Game, Aloha, Anasazi, Astoria, Atta Ants plus two expansions, Augsburg 1520, Buccaneer, Catan Card Game plus expansion, Chip-Chip Hurra, Die Siedler von Catan - Die grosse Karawane, Emira, Factory Fun, Fiji, Fürchterliche Feinde, Hameln, Hermagor, Imperial, Indus, Italia, Kaivai expansion, Kampf um Rom, Leonardo da Vinci, Liberté, Megastar, Metromania, Mr.Jack, New York Central, On the Underground, Pompeii, Section X, Shogun, Skyline of the World, Space Dealer, Subulata, Ur, USA 1910, Wooden Shoes & Iron Monsters, Yspahan.

That doesn't include my haul off the Adlung stand. Adlung Spiele make card games, which rarely see the light of day in the UK. As the boxes are all in German, shops aren't too keen to stock them. I decided to stock up while I was there, and bought most of their range. That will take some sorting out, but will get onto the web site at some point.

The first purchase was Chip-Chip Hurra, before the show started. This is a 2001 children's game by Klaus Teuber that we found in a big hardware store while looking for taps for the bathroom. At 10 Euros it was worth picking up for curiosity value. And so it began.

High on my shopping list was Imperial, from eggertspiele. This appears to have similar mechanism to Antike, which they released last year, but it is quite different. The game is about conflict between six European nations, but rather than tying the players to particular nations, the players act as investors who control nations if they are the strongest investor. To stretch a point, it's a bit like 18xx where the player with the most shares runs the company - and the companies/nations can change hands during the game.

If you know Antike you'll know of the mechanic where you move your piece round a ring of options to determine what you can do. This is also used in Imperial. You can move up to three spaces round the ring for free, but if you want to move further to reach a more attractive option, you have to pay to do it.

1861 is the new 18xx offering from JKLM Games. This is sub-titled Railways of the Russian Empire, and if you've play tested 18RU on the convention circuit in the past few years, this is that game, designed by Ian D Wilson.

The production quality is excellent, easily the best produced 18xx game in recent years. The rules, written by Steve Thomas and amended/enhanced by Mike Hutton, are well laid out, with colour diagrams to help explain things.

It features 16 minor companies, loans, and the Russian State Railway. The RSR is not a player-operated company, but is always operated last in a round by the banker. The RSR can absorb private and minor companies through nationalisation. It also buys trains from the bank, which can move the game on even if the players don't want to.

I've already been asked if I'll run 1861 in these pages or on the web site, and I think the answer is going to be yes - but not right away. Which medium will be best for the game remains to be seen. There is a merger round following each operating round in phases 3 to 7, when the minor companies can convert or merge to form public companies. That may be tricky postally, as you won't know the situation at the end of the round unless we pause before the merger round, and you won't know what has converted or merged unless we pause after the merger round. I'll take a closer look with a view to offering it in the new year.

On the Underground is the other new release from JKLM Games. Another railway theme, this was designed by Sebastian Bleasdale. Comparisons are floating around for Ticket to Ride, Thurn and Taxis, and even Lancashire Railways. You control a number of Underground lines, two in a four or five-player game, three for three players and four for two. A number of destination cards are dealt out beside the board. A passenger token starts on Euston Station. Your aim is to develop your Underground lines and persuade the passenger to move along your lines to get to the revealed destinations.

You can score points in various ways as you develop your lines. After the development phase the passenger will move once or twice according to fairly simple rules. If the route he chooses is along your lines, you gain points. If you can't persuade him to use your lines, someone else will probably be getting the points.

If you're wondering why I picked these three out of the pile, it's simple. They're all new, they've all got good things being said about them, and I've got stock of all three to sell. I'm in the strange position of being able to supply JKLM games while they are still waiting for their own stock to arrive from Germany - although that is likely to be sorted out very soon.

- ◇ Imperial sells for £37 or £39.99, depending on whose RRP you look at. My price is £34.
- ◇ 1861 sells for £40, My price is £36.
- ◇ On the Underground sells for £25, My price is £22.50.

They're all heavy games, so UK parcel post will be £5 on top of that. However, I will be at MidCon this weekend (Nov 10th-12th), and plan to take some with me, so if you're going you can avoid the postage charges. If this gets through the postal system quickly, you'll have time to drop me a line and reserve a copy. ☆

THE NEW MISADVENTURES OF GAMING #6

By Dan Bosley

Meanwhile, back at Vern and Elizabeth's, we have finally finished playing Pass the Bomb. It is now time to engage this Mother's Day Crowd in something a little different.

"What was the other game you brought, Uncle Dan?" asks Jessica.

"Well, this one is a little different. I really don't know how it will go over with you guys, but it can be fun."

I put the game on the coffee table. It is "Finstere Flure."

"Finstere Flure? What the heck is that? That's not English," Vern informs me astutely.

"It isn't?" I ask, taken aback by this sudden news. "How embarrassing. Let me get rid of it right now." I take the game off the coffee table.

"What are you doing, Uncle Dan?" asks Jessica.

"We can't play it. It's not in English," I tell her.

"But you brought it. Don't you know how to play it?"

"Yes, I do."

"So what's it mean?" Vern asks.

"The English version of the game is called 'Fearsome Floors.'"

"Fearsome Floors?" Vern asks.

"Yes. Although I don't think it's a direct translation. Especially since there's only one floor in the game. Fearsome Floor, I guess," I explain.

I open up the lid and put the gameboard on the coffee table and dump out the various components onto the board from their ziplock bag.

"What are all these things?" Grandma asks, pointing at the cardboard body parts.

"Those are monster parts," I tell her.

Grandma just looks at me with that Grandma stare.

"See, here's some heads, and here's some arms and feet and other stuff," I show her.

Grandma looks at the monster-part pieces with a frown on her face. She gives me the Grandma stare again.

"We're going to build a monster out of them, put the pieces together and build a monster," I explain.

Grandma looks back down at the monster parts scattered around the board.

"Here, Jessica, why don't you put a monster together. Just mix and match the parts and come up with a monster," I suggest.

"This game is about making monsters? Monsters with all different hands and feet?" Grandma asks.

"No. No. The monster is the bad guy in this game. We each have 3 characters who are going to start in one corner of the board, and we have to try to escape the dungeon out of the opposite corner. The monster is a danger, a hazard, and he's after us, and we all have to try to avoid him. Everybody pick a colour."

Everyone does so.

I explain that the playing pieces are two sided, and that the two sides add up to seven. Grandma seems unimpressed.

"So?" she asks.

"Well, during your turn, you will move one of your guys up to the number of spaces he is allowed to move. That's the small number you see on top. After you move him, you flip the piece over. Then his other number will be up for the next time he moves. One side has black numbers, and one side has white numbers. Once everyone has moved and flipped all 3 of their guys with the same colour number, the monster gets a turn to move."

I explain the rest of the game to everyone.

Grandma keeps flipping her pieces over and over. She seems a bit puzzled.

"Something the matter, Grandma?" I ask.

"Nope," she says.

"Are we ready to start now? Any other questions?"

No one has any other questions.

I put the monster in his starting place in the corner. The monster has a shoe for a head. He may have difficulty seeing us through the eyelets.

Vern starts by putting his 1-piece in the first space outside the player dungeon - thus preventing any other player's 1-piece from being put into play this turn.

Grandma has a problem with this. "He's in the way, I think," Grandma says.

"Well, yes he is. All that means is that you can't play your 1-move piece this time," I state.

"That's not right. He shouldn't be able to block us like that."

"Well, next time you'll be able to move your 1-move piece 6 spaces instead. Then you'll be able to move out."

"How can I move this piece 6 spaces when it says 1 on the front?" Grandma inquires.

"Well, during this turn, when you can't move your 1-piece at all, you get to turn it over, and then it becomes a 6-space piece for next time."

"My turn is to turn this piece over? And that's it?" Grandma inquires.

"Well, yes.... Unless you want to move one of your other pieces instead. They can move more than 1 space this turn."

"Yes, but Vern is in the way," Grandma protests.

"Yes, but you can pass through him. Any player's piece can 'squeeze by' another player's piece - you just can't share a space when you are finished moving," I explain again.

"This doesn't seem very realistic," Grandma offers her opinion.

"It's a game, Grandma," says Elizabeth. "It's not for real."

"That's right. There aren't any real monsters, at least not ones with shoes for heads, and we're not really in a dungeon castle floor, trying to escape," I say, with an obviously clear grasp of reality.

"And how come he can only move 1 space this turn, and then a big 6 spaces next turn?" Grandma demands to know.

"Because he's resting up during his 1 space move and then he's sprinting the next time," Jessica says.

"Good answer," I say.

Jessica nods.

Grandma finally flips her 1-move piece over as her turn, mumbling something under her breath as she does so.

Everyone takes their turns moving their 3 guys. With 7 players, there is quite a bunch up in the starting corner by the time it becomes the monster's turn to move.

We turn over the first gravestone tile and it has a cross on it.

"Oh-oh, we're going to have death and mayhem," I comment.

Grandma turns her head to gaze at me. Grandma is giving me the Grandma stare again.

I start to move the monster, making suitable monster noises as I do so.

"What are you doing?" Grandma asks.

I look up at her. "I'm moving the monster," I tell her.

"What are those sounds you're making?" she asks.

"Um...those are monster sounds," I explain.

"You're making monster sounds?" Grandma asks.

"What?" asks Grandpa.

"What?" responds Grandma.

"That's what I said," says Grandpa.

"I asked him if he was making monster sounds," Grandma informs Grandpa.

"I didn't hear anything," says Grandpa.

"That's because you're sitting over there and I'm sitting over here and I'm closer and I can hear better. Your son-in-law is making monster sounds," Grandma says.

I am paused in mid-monster-movement. I am now apparently Grandpa's son-in-law, and maybe not so much Grandma's son-in-law.

Grandma turns to me. "Weren't you making sounds?"

"Um, yes. I was. I was making...uh....monster noises," I say.

"I did hear something," Grandpa exclaims. "I thought it was my stomach gurgling," he says. "Or something else. Something else was gurgling. I think," says Grandpa. "A lot of things in my body make noises," Grandpa advises us.

Grandma waggles her finger at Grandpa. "That wasn't your stomach, that was your son-in-law making noises. Noises out of his mouth!" Grandma informs him.

"Noises from where?" Grandpa asks.

"His mouth!" Grandma says excitedly.

"He made noises out of his mouth?" Grandpa inquires.

"Yes!" says Grandma.

"From his mouth? He made noises from his mouth? Which?" Grandpa asks.

"Which what?" Grandma responds with a question of her own.

"What do you mean which what?" Grandpa volleys back.

"What which what are you talking about?" Grandma returns.

"What?" asks Grandpa.

"Yes. Which what?" Grandma responds.

"Which what what?" Grandpa asks, clearly puzzled.

"Which what?" Grandma asks.

"I don't know what you're asking me," Grandpa says.

"Before you said which," Grandma says.

"Yes?" Grandpa replies.

"Which what?" Grandma asks.

"Which question do you want me to answer?" asks Grandpa back at Grandma.

"What do you mean which question? There is only one question!" states Grandma.

"What?" asks Grandpa.

"No, not what. Which?" responds Grandpa.

"Which what?" asks Grandpa.

"Yes!" says Grandma.

"I don't know," says Grandpa.

"But you started it. You must know," says Grandpa.

"What did I start?," asks Grandpa.

"You started the whiching," Grandma says.

"Whiching? I was whiching?" Grandpa inquires, clearly still in the dark. As are most of us.

"Yes, of course you were. You started the whole thing with your son-in-law's monster noises," Grandma lays out for him.

"I don't remember making any monster noises," says Grandpa.

"Not you. Not you. You didn't make any monster noises. Dan was making monster noises!" Grandma informs Grandpa.

"Is that what I was hearing?" Grandpa demands to know.

"I think it was," says Grandma. "I think yes indeed it was."

"I thought it was my stomach gurgling," says Grandpa.

"Yes, you already said that. But the noises were coming from your son-in-law's mouth! Not your stomach," states Grandma.

"Right," says Grandpa.

"Right?" asks Grandma. "What do you mean, right?"

"Right. I mean right. Isn't that what I said?" Grandpa asks.

"Yes," admits Grandma.

I have been paused in mid-monster-movement throughout this discussion. Frankenshoe has been chomping at the bit to get moving again, but I have been contemplating and digesting Grandma's and Grandpa's wise words.

"Good," says Grandpa.

"Good?" asks Grandma.

"Yes. Good," says Grandpa. "That's what I said."

Grandma turns her attention to me. I get the Grandma Stare again.

I smile weakly, and continue moving Frankenshoe. Quietly.

"Now what are you doing?" Grandma asks.

"I'm still moving the monster. He has to get someone first before he will stop moving, and he hasn't done that yet," I announce.

"But I can't hear you," Grandma says.

"That's because I'm not making any sounds now. The monster is just walking quietly now, sneaking up on you."

"What do you mean?" Grandma asks.

"Frankenshoe is sneaking now. Sneaking sneaking. Ever so quietly. No more monster noises. Frankenshoe has learned his lesson," I comment.

I continue moving Frankenshoe. With his remarkable peripheral vision, he turns and starts heading toward the crowd of victims in the corner. As he nears them, he suddenly spies a much closer victim to his left. He turns and attacks. I remove the piece from the board.

Unfortunately it is one of Grandma's people that Frankenshoe has attacked.

"What are you doing?" Grandma demands.

"I'm just putting your piece over here back in the dungeon. He gets to try again." I say.

"Why?"

"Because you were the closest victim that Frankenshoe saw, and he headed toward you first. So you lose this guy, and he gets to try again from the start area."

Grandma glares at me again. Somehow, I get the subtle feeling that this game is not going to be one of Grandma's favourites.

Grandma raises her arm and hand over the board and points directly at Frankenshoe. "So what about the monster? Where is he now?"

"The monster?"

"Yes. Where is he now?"

"You want to know where the monster is?"

"Yes. Where is the monster right now?" demands Grandma.

I'm really not quite sure how to answer that question, given that she is still pointing her finger right at him.

"He's...uh.... he's where he is. Where you're pointing. That's where he is. You're pointing at him."

"He's where I'm pointing at?"

"Yes."

"Good," says Grandma.

I glance around at the others, not sure what to make of that. They all shrug or raise their eyebrows.

We start getting into the game past the first turn. Every time it is Grandma's turn, we have the exact same conversation. Every turn. Word for word.

"Which pieces are mine?" asks Grandma.

"This one and this one and this one, Grandma."

"O.K., I want to move this one. How far can he move?"

"One space. Two spaces. Three spaces. Four spaces. Five spaces. Six spaces." (As the case may be).

"O.K., I want to move him towards the exit."

"Which way?"

"Towards the exit."

"O.K., but there's lots of ways to go. Which way?"

"I don't know. You pick for me."

"O.K." And I move Grandma's piece.

And on Grandpa's turns, every turn, word for word:

"I want to move this guy," says Grandpa.

"You can't," I tell him.

"Why not?"

"Because you just moved him. You have to move the other 2 guys first before you can move him again."

"But I'd rather move this guy. It will give him a better chance of getting out if I can move him every turn."

"Well, you can't move him yet. You have to move one of the other guys first."

Grandpa then sulks.

This is apparently a winning strategy, because in the end, Grandpa is successful and wins the game.

As we are leaving to go home, Grandma pulls me aside.

"I just wanted you to know that I probably would have liked the game more if it was bigger," she confides in me.

"Bigger?" I ask.

"Yes. I couldn't see the board. That's why I was having trouble. I had no idea what was going on. That's why I had to keep asking you what to do. I couldn't see the board."

"But you had your glasses on," I remark.

"Yes, but they're no good. Next time, can you bring a bigger game?" she asks.

"O.K.," I say, momentarily having no idea what game to bring that is bigger.

"Do you have any bigger games?" Grandma asks.

"Well, the only one that is bigger that I can think of off the top of my head is Twister," I say.

"Never heard of it. But that's O.K. I've never heard of any of your games. Bring Twister next time," Grandma says. "Is it like the game we just played? Does it involve monsters with all different hands and feet?"

"Usually," I reply. "Especially when you're a teenager."

"What?" asks Grandpa from right behind us.

"What?" responds Grandma

"I asked you first," says Grandpa.

"You asked me what first?" asks Grandma.

"Yes," says Grandpa.

"Yes, what?" asks Grandma.

"Yes, I asked you what first," says Grandpa.

"Let's just go home," I say, and take Grandma and Grandpa by the arms and lead them away.

"We're playing Twister next time," says Grandma.

1826-E22

Welcome to the 101st 18xx game to be seen in these pages.

NEW GAME

The five players in this game will deal in the following order.

John Shelley	22 Grange Road, Harrow, Middlesex, HA1 2PP
Lyndon Gurr	15b Hedley Street, Maidstone, Kent, ME14 1UG
Don Smith	16 Gilchrist Way, Braintree, Essex, CM7 7SY
Stephen Webb	17 Gladwyn Close, Parkwood, Gillingham, Kent, ME8 9TQ
Tim Franklin	9 Brook Walk, Witham, Essex, CM8 1DQ

You each start with F360 and are looking at six private companies, which is all your first orders need to be concerned with. The six companies have the following names and values:

Ponts de Chaussées	Bridge	Cost	F20	Revenue	F5
Régie des Postes	Mail	Cost	F40	Revenue	F10
Chemins de Fer D'Algérie	Algerian	Cost	F70	Revenue	F15
Grand Central Belge	Belgian	Cost	F110	Revenue	F20
Compagnie Paris-Rouen	Parisian	Cost	F160	Revenue	F25
Ligne Strasbourg-Bâle	Alsatian	Cost	F220	Revenue	F30

Check your rule books for the benefits that these items bring. When the Paris-Rouen and Strasbourg-Bâle privates are bought, the initial par price for the Paris and Alsace public companies will be set at F110 unless you advise me otherwise.

The common approach to the bidding process is to indicate what you want to go for (or what you want to avoid) and the maximum you'll pay. Bids will be F5 above the initial price or the last bid unless you advise otherwise. Some players just say 'buy whatever I'm offered', some also give a total limit on expenditure.

If anyone fancies orders like 'buy any', please let me know if you mean any one (and only one), or any (and all) that are offered to you. I've hit that particular problem before, and it an easy one to avoid once you know of it.

Maps and tile sheets are enclosed for everyone, but put those in a safe place until you need them. Note that on the reverse of the tile sheet there is an information panel explaining how to order tile lays for your companies. Please take note and let me know if you have any queries on this topic.

After the sale of the private companies we'll have the tail end of the first stock round before we hit the first operating round. Enjoy the game.

We enter the stock round with Lyndon, Alan and David over the certificate limit now that the GSWR has risen out of the 'yellow' zone. They'll have to start their round by selling one or two shares to bring themselves down to 17 certificates.

The LNWR converted its last survey party to a token in Manchester, depriving some other companies of the option to use that station. The LNWR will no longer be able to lay tiles or upgrade tiles, as both actions require the movement of a survey party.

Stephen brought the CGR into play and made it a shorter operating round. Is Stephen hadn't done it, Rob would have when the TGB operated.

Peter wanted the WGB to fold into the CGR, but it has trains and no outstanding loans, so could not join the club. Stephen, your calculations on how much you needed to give the CV to clear its loan was based on the '6' train being $630, but they are $700 in 1856. I presumed you were more interested in keeping the company than keeping the cash difference.

NEW GAME

The five players for the latest Acquire game will deal in this order:

Michael Graystone	2 Grovelands Road, St.Paul's Cray, Orpington, Kent, BR5 3EF
John Colledge	Dunorloch, 24 Brunstane Bank, Edinburgh, EH15 2NR
Colin Sharpe	94 Surrey Grove, Sutton, Surrey, SM1 3PN
Simon Brooks	7 Birling Way, Uckfield, East Sussex, TN22 1LP
Willem Moene	Dijkhuizen 4, 1112 SB Diemen, The Netherlands

£6,000 rests in your bank accounts, and the board looks like this.

Tony Wilcock was on the list for this game, but I didn't get orders from him last time, and decided to play safe in case he was unable to make the start of this game.

1-A	2-A	3-A	4-A	5-A	6-A	7-A	8-A	9-A	10-A	11-A	12-A
1-B	2-B	3-B		5-B	6-B	7-B	8-B	9-B	10-B	11-B	12-B

Allan Stagg (Stargate, 1st): Well, 30 points at the end was enough to give me victory. It did not look like that after the second sprint - Jim was well ahead, and looked favourite. He was unlucky to have three riders dropped, and I was fortunate that the points were spread fairly evenly between the other players. In fact, no single rider will have gained more than 20 points. Compare this to game 16, where Thomas has Broken Away big time, and will earn his team 40 points. This leaves the other teams effectively playing for second place, and is the reason why I much prefer the limited break away bonus rules. Thanks for GMing this game, Keith, and commiserations to my opponents.

Roger Trethewey (Bridge Riders, 4th): Congratulations are due to Allan for winning a good game. I think my bridge skills deserted me, and I left too much to dummy. Thanks, Keith, for good as ever reporting.

Martin Butcher (Designers Four, 6th): Useless, totally useless. Those guys should stick to their day jobs! Congratulations to Allan for a resounding victory and to Keith for running the game.

 Congratulations to Allan indeed, nine points clear and with the strong man of Stargate first to the finish line.

ROUND 11

I did COLIN a dis-service last time, as his route for run 30 was quite legal. He came second to BUM and paid him 10 points for the privilege, so the end result was the same.

With a continuous string of riders - if you ignore Thomas for the moment - there are some very respectable replacement cards coming into play.

That should give the riders at the back the chance to move to the front of the group and see about getting some points at the second sprint.

#13

Picture number 15 is a stained glass window. This one is in the mosque in Cordoba.

#14

Picture number 16 is the logo for the Essen game fair. I thought this one would have been more recognisable, having been on the cover a few years back. But yes, it was a few years.

It is a tangram, which was guessed, but that wasn't as specific as I had hoped for.

It certainly hadn't been my intention for the last two picture to stump everyone, but there were some wonderful guesses for the stained glass window. I think my favourite was a narrow boat exiting a tunnel.

It's congratulations to Simon Robertson, who started strongly and never lost the lead. Many thanks for everyone who took part.

NEW GAME

This game takes place in Kyrzygia, a landlocked, mountainous republic in Central Asia, lying on the old Silk Road. Five companies are taking the challenge to the mountains, and their directors will be dealing in this order:

- Simon Robertson Melyn, Colyton Way, Purley-on-Thames, Reading, Berkshire, RG8 8BL
- Simon Brooks 7 Birling Way, Uckfield, East Sussex, TN22 1LP
- Jim Reader 55A Yamate-Cho, Naka-ku, Yokohama 231-0862, Japan
- Bob Coull 1 Lingfield House, Lancaster Street, London, SE1 0RW
- Michael Graystone 2 Grovelands Road, St.Paul's Cray, Orpington, Kent, BR5 3EF

If you give me the cards to pay for things, please don't list a number of different things and then give me the cards to pay for all of them, because you are only allowed to combine payments for multiple items of the same type. Giving me the whole shopping list and the payment for everything Doesn't really help as I have to work out how to split payments for different things - if indeed an exact split can be made.

2nd	Peter Mearns	PUPPET	305
3rd	Bob Coull	MATE	291
4th	Simon Robertson	TGV	259
5th	Colin Sharpe	COLIN	157

Bob Coull (MATE, 3rd): Well done Steve for such a resounding win. Any tips?

Simon Robertson (TGV, 4th): Congratulations to Steve who ended up with something very similar to the east-west route that looked the best to me before we started the game. The strength of the route is supported by Peter coming second with a slightly inferior version of it. Well done to Peter for taking the risk and going for it from the Prague start. I had decided that it was too likely to get blocked by the Brno starters. Colin and I suffered from identical starts and then having to make do with poor/long-winded access to the east. Thanks Keith and all for the game.

For a leapfrog game, people got on without them most of the time. TBD only made two in the game, while TGV made the most at four.

John Marsden	Lowestoft	Opening Directly East (ODE)
Simon Robertson	London	Theophilus' Goods Vehicles (TGV)
Colin Sharpe	Peterborough	Cromer Ongar London Inter Network (COLIN)

I had two first choices for Peterborough, and Simon lost out on the selection, having to take his second option of London instead.

I was asked if my map was the same as David Watts' edition 1a of March 1996. The answer is that it was taken from that version, so unless I have made any unintended changes, it is the same. However, if you use David's map and then find there are differences later on, that's a risk you take. I shall be working from my map.

Special run 6 says that a seaside resort is any town on open sea (not estuary). That wording is from the original map, and I take it to mean that Felixstowe (or Flexistowe, as my version is spelt - oops!) And Harwich are included, because they have a hex side facing the open sea, but Tollesbury and Burnham are not included, as they are only on an estuary.

NEWS FROM THE ROCK

<http://www.fwtwr.com/>

This is the section that provides news of the Internet sibling of this zine.

✦ It was quiet. Too quiet. But that was not a bad thing, because there were plenty of other things to be getting on with.

Actually, it was a bad thing, because my mail ISP has been merrily rejecting mail, claiming that their service was unavailable. Somehow, I don't think the upgrade they did a few weeks ago went quite as planned. The outcome is that some people are having to resend orders when the originals get rejected. I sincerely hope they get things sorted out, or I'll have to look for a new mail provider.

✦ Here are the current web ratings for zine subscribers with a rating of 2.0 or more:

PREVIEW

The waiting lists have gained a new entry, albeit not a new flavour. 1861: Railways of the Russian Empire is open for players, although I would appreciate your thoughts on the best way to handle the minor company merger rounds that take place after every operating round.

Are they best dealt with after the operating round, when you might not know how the companies are connected, or best left to the start of the next report, leaving you uncertain which companies you're going to be running? Either way, it looks like this will be running at one operating round a month while the merger rounds are taking place. Alternatively, it doesn't run here at all but becomes another option for the web site.

Here's the plan for new games due to start in the next issues.

- #138: Acquire (Powers), Railway Rivals (Israel and Palestine)
- #139: 1850

GAME ORDERS

Please observe these guidelines when sending your orders.

- ✱ The game name and game number must be given for each set of orders.
- ✱ Your own name and where relevant, your company name and game colour, must be given for all game orders, preferably at the top of the orders.
- ✱ When you need to refer to other players in a game, you should use their company name and colour if these are present in the game.
- ✱ Do not use both sides of the same sheet of paper for different games.
- ✱ When sending orders via e-mail, make sure they are sent as plain text, with FWTDR or die rolls somewhere in the subject line.
- ✱ E-mail orders should be sent to one address only. You may know of more than one address that can reach me, but they all converge on one mailbox. When orders are sent to more than one source, I have to check they are in fact identical.
- ✱ Leave a reasonable space between orders for different games so that they can be easily separated and filed. If you're typing your orders, put at least three blank lines between orders for different games. I expect a minimum of two inches of paper for each game. On the other hand, please do not submit orders using double-line spacing throughout, as this tends to push a simple set of orders onto two sheets of paper.
- ✱ Remember that the deadlines given are when the orders should reach me, not when orders should be sent. Please do not rely on speedy postal delivery, or on instant e-mail delivery.

Handling NMRs (No Move Received)

- ✱ If you normally post orders to me and I do not have an e-mail address for you, I cannot remind you but will give as much time as possible for late orders to arrive.
- ✱ If I have an e-mail address for you, I will usually send a reminder the day after the deadline, although this is not guaranteed.
- ✱ If you are unable to provide orders straight away, it is of immense help if you can reply to any reminder and let me know when you hope to provide orders.
- ✱ Games will not normally be held over due to a shortage of orders.
- ✱ My actions for a player with no orders depends on the game, but usually involves holding still unless the game has specific rules for NMRs. For Bus Boss and Railway Rivals runs, I will take a brief look at the game and enter the player runs that cost the least, to avoid skewing the results for the other players.
- ✱ If orders arrive once I have adjudicated a game, I may rerun it, but this is entirely at my discretion and depends on how much time I have.

GAME STANDARDS

Games that involve auctions

I interpret auction orders in the following way.

A bid for a specific figure means just that - you will bid that figure and nothing else. If you want to bid above a previous bid and are willing to go to a maximum bid, then order your bid up to that maximum. You will then bid the minimum possible, and keep bidding until you win the auction or reach your maximum. If you are entitled to any discounts, do not deduct the discount before bidding. Any applicable discounts will be deducted after the auction is over.

Bus Boss and Railway Rivals

For Railway Rivals, the games I run use a single building allowance during the building rounds, rather than three separate die rolls.

During the operating rounds, Bus Boss scoring is used for both games. This shares 30 points between all entrants. If only one player enters a run, they get the full 30 points (less any payments they need to make to rivals). Players who complete a run in the same turn share placings. If shared placings mean that points cannot be shared evenly, the poorer player at the time of the run gains the odd point. If the players are tied before the run, the odd point is discarded.

When ordering for operating rounds, you should always list the runs in their proper sequence. You should not list runs you are not entering, as this often makes orders more confusing. If one or more runs is conditional on joint runs or other arrangements being accepted, the conditional order should appear against the run so that I can check the conditions before proceeding.

The maximum you may pay any single player in a run is ten points. If the length of the route you need to enter a run is more than twice the shortest route of any other entrant, your entry will be rejected, but that run will count towards the number that you are allowed to enter.

Rules for carried over runs:

Bus Boss:
The limit of five runs applies at all times.

Railway Rivals:
If 1 run is carried over, then you are still limited to 4 runs.
If 2 or 3 are carried over, then you can enter 5 runs.
If 4 or 5 are carried over, then you can enter 6 runs.
If 6 or 7 are carried over, then you can enter 7, and so on, but the referee may need sorting out if it gets this bad (i.e. building allowances were too small).
In all these cases, you can choose your runs from all those available.
